CHALLENGES AND PATHS TO GLOBAL JUSTICE
CONTENTS

List of Tables vi

Notes on the Contributors vii

Preface ix

1 Introduction: Challenges and Paths 1
   H. Richard Friman

2 When International Protection Fails 23
   Maureen Lynch

3 The Success of Tradition: Lisan and the Reintegration of East Timorese Militia Members 43
   Chris Lundry

4 Rights-Based Approaches to International Development 63
   Lowell Ewert

5 Humanitarians with Guns: Globalized Rights, Cultural Space, and Militarized Aid in Afghanistan 81
   Aman Mojadidi

6 Pathways to Peace: Revolution versus Resolution 101
   Marie Pace

7 Contingent Ironies of Globalization: Rupert Murdoch, Patrimonial Politics, and Patriotism 119
   Barrett L. McCormick

8 Power, Justice, and Peace Building 135
   Kevin P. Clements

9 Religion, Power, and the American Empire 153
   Daniel C. Maguire

Bibliography 167

Index 181
LIST OF TABLES

2.1 Involuntary Returns 29
NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Kevin P. Clements is director of the Asia-Pacific Center for Peace and Conflict Studies, University of Queensland, Australia, and former president of International Alert (UK). His past positions also include president of the International Peace Research Association, director of the Quaker United Nations Office in Geneva, director of the Institute for Conflict Analysis and Resolution at George Mason University, and head of the Peace Research Centre at the Australian National University in Canberra.

Lowell Ewert is a human rights lawyer and director of Peace and Conflict Studies, Conrad Grebel University College, affiliated with the University of Waterloo, Ontario. He has developed regional strategies for humanitarian relief, food distribution, local development, and democracy projects in Central Asia, the Middle East, and Latin America, and has worked with the Mennonite Central Committee and Mercy Corps International.

H. Richard Friman is professor of political science, Eliot Fitch Chair for International Studies, and director of the Institute for Transnational Justice at Marquette University. He is the author of four books, and numerous book chapters and articles on transnational justice issues tied to the illicit global economy.

Chris Lundry is a PhD candidate in the Department of Political Science at Arizona State University. His research interests include Indonesia, East Timor, and Southeast Asia in general, democratization, human rights, and development. He is currently writing and researching his dissertation on separatism in Indonesia and the Philippines.

Maureen Lynch is director of research at Refugees International (RI), a Washington, D.C.-based humanitarian advocacy organization. Her current work is focused on the global problem of statelessness. Prior to joining RI, Dr. Lynch worked for the UN High Commissioner for Refugees and the Immigration and Refugee Services of America.
Daniel C. Maguire is professor of ethics in the Department of Theology at Marquette University. He is the author or editor of 13 books, and is past president of the Society of Christian Ethics and president of the Religious Consultation on Population, Reproductive Health and Ethics.

Barrett L. McCormick is professor of political science at Marquette University. His current research explores media markets and the transformation of China’s public sphere. He is the author of three books, numerous book chapters, and articles in leading journals on China and Asia.

Aman Mojadidi is an independent consultant and former development and outreach officer for the nonprofit nongovernmental organization Help the Afghan Children (HTAC). Established in 1993, the HTAC provides educational, health, and emergency relief services through humanitarian aid and international development.

Marie Pace is currently peace and development adviser for the United Nations Development Program in Nigeria. She holds a PhD in social science in affiliation with the Program on the Analysis and Resolution of Conflicts (PARC) at Syracuse University. She has taught at the University of Connecticut, Clark University, College of the Holy Cross, and the University of Massachusetts. Her chapter is adapted from her doctoral work on civil society’s contributions to justice and peacemaking in divided societies.
The origins of this volume lie in the twentieth annual conference of the Wisconsin Institute for Peace and Conflict Studies (WIPCS) held at Marquette University in 2004, and cosponsored by the Marquette University Institute for Transnational Justice. WIPCS is a consortium of 22 public and private colleges and universities from around the state exploring teaching and research on the roots of violence, on national and global security issues, and on all factors necessary for a just global peace. The Institute for Transnational Justice located at Marquette University provides multidisciplinary networking opportunities for research and teaching on issues of economic, political, and social justice that extend beyond national borders. This volume draws on a significantly revised selection of conference papers.

The volume would not have been possible without the insights of the scholars, practitioners, and graduate and undergraduate students who participated in the 2004 WIPCS conference. In addition to the contributors to the volume, special thanks go to: Ian Harris, Eric Yonke, and Sarah Stillwell for facilitating the conference and encouraging the exploration of a more focused publication; Barrett McCormick and Ryan Hanley for their important insights; and Jeff Crean and Leah Manney for helping to compile the manuscript. The conference and project would not have been possible without the extensive support of the Eliot Fitch Endowment at Marquette University, the Helen Way Klinger College of Arts and Sciences, and especially Michael McKinney and Mary Dunnwald. Appreciation also goes to Anthony Wahl and Heather Van Dusen at Palgrave Macmillan for their efforts in guiding the manuscript to publication. Finally, my deepest gratitude goes to my wife, Julie, whose support and patience continue to humble me.

H. Richard Friman
Milwaukee