New Perspectives in German Studies

General Editors: Michael Butler is Emeritus Professor of Modern German Literature at the University of Birmingham and Professor William E. Paterson OBE is Professor of European and German Politics at the University of Birmingham and Chairman of the German British Forum.

Over the last twenty years the concept of German studies has undergone major transformation. The traditional mixture of language and literary studies, related very closely to the discipline as practised in German universities, has expanded to embrace history, politics, economics and cultural studies. The conventional boundaries between all these disciplines have become increasingly blurred, a process which has been accelerated markedly since German unification in 1989/90.

New Perspectives in German Studies, developed in conjunction with the Institute for German Studies and the Department of German Studies at the University of Birmingham, has been designed to respond precisely to this trend of the interdisciplinary approach to the study of German and to cater for the growing interest in Germany in the context of European integration. The books in this series will focus on the modern period, from 1750 to the present day.

Acknowledgements

Although this volume is based solely on commissioned chapters without a preceding conference, its publication has nevertheless relied on the generous support of a number of funding bodies.

In particular, the editors would like to thank the School of Historical Studies of the University of Birmingham for covering editorial costs as well as the costs of translation for three chapters. Support for the research on which the individual chapters are based has come from many different organizations, including the Alexander von Humboldt-Stiftung, the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft, the Nuffield Foundation and Social Science Research Council. To all of these organizations we would like to express our gratitude. Thanks are also due to series editor Michael Butler for his careful reading of the entire manuscript and for the many improvements we were able to make on the basis of his comments. A final word of thanks goes to our translators Wayne Yung and Daniel Hendrickson, both of whom saved us a lot of time and effort.
